OKLAHOMA MOB BURNS A NEGRO

Brush Pile Soaked With Coal Oil
Oil Poured Over Victim, Torch
Then Applied—Body Was Burned
To a Crisp.

Purcell, Okla., Aug. 24.—Pete Carter, the negro identified as the man who attacked Mrs. Minnie Spraggins and set fire to her home, near here, last night, was burned to death by a mob in the main street of Purcell late this afternoon. Three thousand persons witnessed the negro's death.

Under Sheriff Farris and Deputy Sheriff Hayes made desperate efforts to prevent the burning of the negro, but the mob locked the officers in the courthouse.

Preparing the Pyre.

While men and women looked on, a few men soaked a brush pile with coal oil and then poured oil over the negro who was thrown upon the brush. A torch was then touched to the fagots and a blaze shot up hiding the screaming black from view. His body was burned to a crisp.

The negro was caught by three other blacks this afternoon near the Oklahoma Central railway station as he was preparing to leave Purcell. Houghley Henry, a negro janitor at the courthouse, found him hiding under a box car. Assisted by two other negroes who had armed themselves and joined in the search for Carter, Henry took the alleged assailant to the main street of Purcell. There he was turned over to the crowd which had gathered when the report that the negro had been captured was spread.

Under Sheriff Farris and Deputy Sheriff Hayes were among the first to reach the spot where the mob had gathered and made a strong effort to prevent the lynching, assuring the leaders of the mob that there would be no chance of the negro's escape.

The officers were allowed to talk to the crowd and were led to the courthouse, presumably to confer with the leaders. As they entered a room in the building, the key was turned in the lock and they were held prisoners until the negro was dead.

As soon as the officers had been locked up the negro was led out and placed on the brush, which had been piled around a telephone pole. He was tied to the pole and the torch applied.

Fire Starts, Crowd Cheers.

Cheers came from the crowd as the flames licked his face, and men and women in automobiles watched him die.

As he was lashed to the pole the negro shrieked for mercy. After the flames died down the crowd slowly dispersed.

Mrs. Spraggins was able to tell the story of the crime today. She said Carter entered her home at 9 o'clock last night and struck her on the head with a piece of gaspipe, knocking her down. He then beat her, the woman says, until she was almost senseless, and then attacked her. He then tore up a mattress, scattered it over her body and touched a match to it, fleeing from the house.

Just as she began to crawl from the blazing mattress the negro returned. Kneeling beside her, he again beat her with the gaspipe, breaking her jawbone and beating her badly about the body. As soon as the negro left the house she managed to crawl outside where she lay under a bench near the house.

Her husband, who was returning home, saw the flames and ran to the house. She was found unconscious and probably would have been suffocated in a few minutes. Officers later found the negro in bed at his house. He was arrested and turned over to the constable, but later made his escape.

Mrs. Spraggins is not expected to live.

ATWOOD ENDS LONG FLIGHT

Lands at Governor's Island After
Flight from Nyack—Intrepid Visitor
Too Tired to Attempt Flight to Boston.

New York, Aug. 25.—Harry T. Atwood, the American aviator, ended his long record flight from St. Louis when he landed at Governor's Island at 2:38 o'clock this afternoon. Atwood flew to town from Nyack, a distance of thirty miles, in forty-five minutes. He followed the diver's course, flying most of the time fifty to one hundred feet above the surface of the water.

Thousands of people flocked to the city roofs and cheered the aviator as he flew down the river. The whistles of steamships and all manner of watercraft joined in a noisy welcome. Atwood had planned to land at Sheephead bay, and he may fly there later, but officially his trip ended at Governor's Island.

Nyack, Aug. 25.—Morning rains, followed by a downpour, ceased at noon; but the wind suddenly veered around to the north. In order to get the aeroplane out of the trap and make it possible to take wind, woodsmen cut down several trees so it could be taken to a nearby meadow, where it would be easier to make a start.

Breaking Flight Records Hard Work.

Breaking the world's distance record for aeroplane flight is hard work and Harry N. Atwood, the American holder, was a tired man when he went to bed last night after flying from Castleton. Nevertheless the young Bostonian rose early today and by 8:30 o'clock was at a little clearing on the side of Hook mountain, where an accident to his engine forced him to land yesterday and frustrated his ambition to complete the flight from St. Louis to New York in eleven days.

Atwood intends to finish his journey today if possible, but the hour of his start and whether he would start to day at all were in doubt when an automobile carried him away from the St. George hotel this morning.

Atwood said that even if he got his biplane off the ground this morning he did not intend to continue the flight to New York until later in the day. His main anxiety was to extricate himself from the pocket where the exigencies of his plight forced him to land shortly before noon yesterday.

Wind Favorable.

What little wind there was this morning came from the southwest and was favorable to the aviator's purposes. Behind his machine the mountain rose like a wall, cutting off all hope of escape in that direction. Before him toward the river, were trees over which he had to fly before he could reach the open air space. A head wind increased his chances of making a rise that would carry him over the trees and out of danger. Once beyond the trees there were open fields a short distance down the river where he could land and wait for a favorable opportunity to start the last jump of his long journey later in the day.

Damaged Engine Repaired.

When Atwood returned to the hotel for breakfast after inspecting his engine he said that the damage had all been repaired. He soon found the wind to his liking and feared that at any minute it might veer to an unfavorable quarter. When a light rain began to fall he said this would not keep him from attempting a flight if other conditions were favorable.

HAD HALF MILLION DIED OF HUNGER

New York, Aug. 25.—Although he lived in abject poverty and died from lack of proper food, the will of Dr. Charles F. Meyers an eccentric uptown physician, shows that he was worth hundreds of thousands of dollars. His lawyer places the value of his estate at $500,000. His holdings include twenty pieces of New York real estate and a safe full of bonds and mortgages.

The physician, who was 65 years old lived like the poorest of men, cooking his own food in the one room in which he slept, ate and carried on his business affairs. Ten years ago some influential friends succeeded in getting him an honorary degree of doctor of civil law from a Canadian college. The physician however decided that the railroad fare was too much to make it worth his while to go after it. Relatives in New England will inherit his property.
